It is a fiercely hot afternoon in Mumbai and my jeans are clinging to my legs as the rickshaw weaves through the traffic-choked streets. I am on my way to meet Upen Patel, a young British Asian who last year won the Best Newcomer award at the Indian Film Awards, held in Yorkshire. Not bad going for someone who grew up in Brent, north west London, and who only a few years earlier had been studying computer science at the University of Hertfordshire. Patel was spotted by a model scout while a student, and, after his work led him to India, he found himself catapulted into Bollywood stardom.

The rickshaw splutters to a halt outside the offices of the model agency Patel owns in the hip district of Bhandra, sometimes referred to
